

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background of the Study

Language as a tool of communication is very important in the world. There are many countries which have different languages. English is used among English people and etc. English language is very important everywhere, because it is a tool of communication. Every country has different languages; they use language for their own society. But English language an international language in the world and if they want to communicate with other countries, they can use English. Many people use more than one language for communication. Communication to other people, need a certain communication tool to other people who speak the same language. International language is more effectively used in various countries, so people use English to communicate with others.

Figurative language is expressed by means of metaphor or other figure of speech. Figurative language is addicted to or abounding in figures of speech. Figure of speech is unusual, essentially metaphorical mode of expression, used for effect in speech and writing and to clarify on deepen meaning by suggesting similitude's which provoke thought. according to Potter (1967:53), The general term that will use for the figure of speech that make up figurative language is metaphor, much as the term imagery, which narrowly rivers to visual phenomena, is nevertheless used to cover other sense-impressions as well (Potter, 1967:53). Figure of speech change ordinary language through repetition, substitution, sound and wordplay. They mess around with words, skipping them, swapping them, and making them sound different. It is often associated with literature and with poetry in particular. However the fact is, whether the people are conscious of it or not, the people use figure of speech every day in their writing and conversations. Using original figures of speech in writing is a way to convey meaning in fresh, unexpected ways.

According to X.J Kennedy that figure of speech may be said whenever a writer or speaker, for the sake of emphasis or freshness, departs from the ordinary denotations of words. From the above quotation, figurative language is a way to reflect the characteristic of the film and the way the writer think. Figurative language used not in usual literal sense but imaginative way. Figures of speech are not devices to state what is demonstrably untrue. Indeed they often state truths, and they lend emphasis.

Figurative language is language using words or expressions with a meaning that is different from the literal interpretation. It's literally in compatible terms, forces the readers to attend the connotation rather than the denotation, and good figurative language is words used non in literal sense but of what the writer's feel, sense, taste, expression, and purpose. Figurative languages have some elements. They are metaphor, simile, personification, paradox, hyperbole, apostrophe, and metonymy (Kennedy, 1983:481).it is not intended to be interpreted in literal sense. Appealing to the imagination, figurative language provides new ways of looking at the world. It always makes use of a comparison between different things. Figurative language compares two things that are different in enough ways so that their similarities, when pointed out, are interesting, unique, and surprising.
